AIA SAN DIEGO SCHOLARSHIP

NewSchool of Architecture & Design and American Institute of Architects (AIA) San Diego have partnered together to launch a scholarship for the top architecture and design professionals interested in pursuing their graduate degrees at NewSchool of Architecture & Design. The annual scholarships of up to $5,000 are awarded to graduate architecture students who express interest in supporting the mission of the Center for Healthy Environments at NewSchool.

Recently, the American Institute of Architects (AIA) named NewSchool as a charter member of the national Design and Health Research Consortium, which will fund basic research on how design affects public health. The mission of the Center for Healthy Environments at NewSchool is to promote the school's established leadership and expertise in the fields of neuroscience for architecture and healthy urbanism.

The American Institute of Architects, San Diego represents nearly 1,000 members in San Diego County and is one of more than 20 chapters in California and among nearly 275 nationwide. Founded in 1927, AIA San Diego has a long record of achievement supporting the interests of our members and our community through its vigorous advocacy for design, planning, sustainability, architecture education, professional development and civic leadership.

NewSchool's School of Architecture is globally recognized for its forward-thinking professors, industry connections and inspiring campus community. NewSchool's Master of Architecture program has been named one of the Top-30 graduate programs in architecture by Frame magazine, a leading resource in the design fields.
